David Parker

Dr. Parker received his undergraduate degree from Furman University and his Master's and PhD degrees from UNC at Chapel Hill. He taught medieval and Renaissance literature at Gardner-Webb University for twenty years, retiring as head of the English department. He taught writing for thirty years, and has served on many scholarship interview committees. He opened Tutor Doctor of Shelby in October 2017.

"I was fortunate to have David Parker as a professor for several courses and as my faculty advisor throughout my college career. He clearly truly cared about me as an individual and went above and beyond to encourage me educationally and vocationally. He had such a positive impact on me as an impressionable college student, and I so appreciate that he expressed such faith in me and encouraged me to achieve more than I thought I was capable of achieving."

-Larissa Bixler Stein, Attorney and Senior Fiduciary Advisory Specialist at Wells Fargo Private Bank

Kimberly Lloyd

Ms. Lloyd received her undergraduate degree from Davidson College and her Master's degree from UNC at Chapel Hill. Before coming to Thomas Jefferson, she taught at Queens University in Charlotte and at Isothermal Community College in Spindale, NC. In addition to college advising, she has extensive experience teaching language, test prep, and study skills.

"Mrs. Lloyd's unique, energetic teaching style and genuine delight in seeing her students succeed led me to take French 2 with her last year. She has played a major part in helping me discover my passion for foreign languages and developing an idea of how I would like to apply that passion in my post high school life. As my college counselor, she guided me in my college decision and helped me create a more solid plan for my future."
